A POPULAR FOOD PLANT.

What a great discovery the tomato was as an article ot food. While most food plants are of ancient origin, there are plenty of people living today who can remember when it was only an ornament cultivated for the beauty of of veterans who took part in the its dainty blossom and its hand-war of 1812 are receiving checksome fruit. While its beauty was admired it was considered like poisonous oak, dangerous to even handle except by dark completted persons. Years of acquaintanceship, however, wore off its super- tributes $1,010.000 each quarter to sturion, and a few "fool-hardy" ac tually owned up to having tasted the fruit.

From this small beginnidg, has gradually grown a use that makes today an industry with a combined capital of over thirty millions of dottars, which disburses millions of dollars to its employees each year money goes to colored pensioners and aggregates an output of two hundred and forty millions caps. This product goes into every household in the land and is as familiar au article of diet as any other of the staple products of the soil. Each year sees an increasing consumption and the more intimate the acquaintance the greater the

The reason for this is ob vions. There is no better appetizer and as an article of seasoning the tomato imparts a taste that can not be imiitated. It is so distinctive that ts presence cau be located even in minute particles, yet the | ungency has everything that deligh the palate and nothing that offends the

The growth of its general popu' rity dates back to the time of the first successful pecking houses. When the use of the tomato as a food was established, demand made it necessary to have a cheaper price than the local market gardener could afford, and to meet this the tin can as a diminisher of space was called into requisition. It was found much cheaper proportionately to raise one thousand bushels than ten so by the aid of the tin the cooked product could be placed on the consumer's table at a price so reasonable as to enable its daily use. Moreover, the article put in the can is brought fresh picked from the field, hermetically sealed Lancaster, July 18-3 days. and immediately sterilized by heat, Houstonville, July 25-3 days. while the uncanned fruit is fre- Madisonville, July 31-5 days. quently shipped for hundreds of Danville, August 1-3 days. miles before it is used as a food. LMOST COMPLETE DESTRUC TION OF THE PICTURESOUE CALIFORNIA COLLEGE.

Built in Spanish Architecture and Cost of Buildings Alone was Thirty Million Dollars-Will Probably be

One of the mose serious results of the Pacific coast earthquake disaster sity, near Palo Alto. More than $30, 000,000 had been expended on the buildings alone, and the damage has been so severe that it will mean practically an entire loss. This group of buildings was planned and built on a prearranged scheme and has been accounted the finest group of structures for educational purposes on this continent, if not in the entire world. The buildings were all in the picturesque Spanish mission style, with the arch as e principal architectural feature. This fact, which was so much a source of beauty, has probably been the largest source of destruction, because, while the arch undisturbed is one of the most secure of building forms, when thrown out of plumb it must fall.

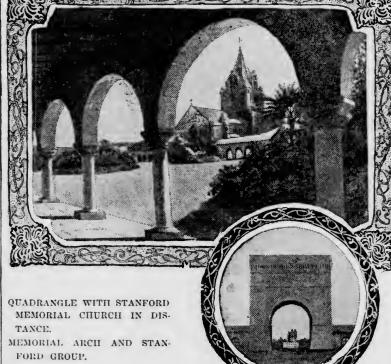

IRREPARABLE ART LOSS. The main buildings are built around an inner quadrangle, which contains he offices of administration and some lass rooms. These buildings are ali one story in height. The outer quadrangle, which comprises the principal architectural features of the university, bas as main points of interest the memorial arcb, with its wonderful frieze, by St. Gaudens, representing the progress of civilization in America, and directly opposite this, through the inner quadrangle, the Stanford Memorial Church, with its mosaic front depicting the "Sermon on the Mount."
This building cost, in construction alone, $1,000,000, exclusive of the mosaics and carvings inside and out, and its marble statues and art treasures rom Europe.

Perhaps it may be said that the loss of the buildings and equipment, in spite of their great value, is the least part of the disaster, because since the university was started on Senator Stanford's Palo Alto ranch it has been a marvelous incentive toward higher education on the Pacific coast. Not only has it gone ahead with great strides on its own account, but it has carried the State University at Berkeley along with it in healthy rivalry, until the two gave an equipment for higher education in California that was not rivaled by that of any other State. The thunderous detonations to which the terrified city listened all that dreadful Friday night meant the salvation of many lives. But though the walls still stood, it was only an empty victory for the fire, as bare brick and smoking ruins are poor food for flames.

EFFECTIVE WORK OF WEEK.

Capt. MacBride's dynamiting equad realized that a stand was hopeless, except on Van Ness avenue. They could have forced their explosives further in the burning section, but not a pound of the terrible guncotton could be or was wasted. The ruined block that met the wlde thoroughfare formed a trench through the clustered structures that the conflagration, wild as it was, could not leap. Engines pumping brine through Fort Madison from the bay completed the little work that the gun-cotton had left, but for three days the haggard-eyed firemen guarded the flickering ruins.

The desolate waste straight through the heart of the city is a mute witness to the most heroic and effective work of the whole calamity. Three men did this—three, simply, because they would not trust their work to others—and when their work was over and what stood of the city for the first time rested quietly, they departed as modestly as they had come. They were ordered to save San Francisco; they obeyed orders, and Capt. MacBride and his two gunners made history on that dreadful night.

W. L. REYNOLDS, Manager, 63 Washington Street, Dept. 758, Chicago.

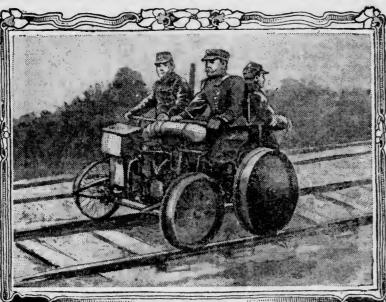

The majority of men believe that the best and most fashionable in men's clothes comes from London; and that the best dressed man in the world is the American turned out by a London tailor.

An American who spends a great part of his time in London, and is rather a stickler for the correct thing, was recently hailed on Broadway by a friend with the remark, "So that's what they're wearing in London, eh?" The man addressed shook his head. Suit made in Washington, overcoat in New York," he said. "Thought you were togged out from Bond Street, sure," in a disappointed Then the man who lives much in London made this radical announcement: They can't make a sack suit in Eng You ask a Bond Street tailor an American business suit with an American fit, and he turns out a and gold shirt studs with it, in place

Each class has its gar ments and each garment its use.

In London the Tuxedo is still a lounge coat, something to be slipped on during the early evening and dis carded for the formal "swallow tall" before starting for any entertainment But the American has forced it into public life, has ordained a black tie open front when it's unbuttoned."

Yet some West End tailoring establishments in London depend for their very existence on American trade, not alone the trade of Americans traveling abroad, but a mail order business which entails making on measurements and forwarding by express, likewise payment of duty. So impor tant is this business that a cable code has been arranged. With this code, a complete catalog and full directions for self measurement, a man may cable his order to London, and feel reasonably certain that the clothes he wants will leave England by the next westward bound steamer.

One traveler from a firm in London making a specialty of cable orders recently visited New York and booked orders to the amount of six thousand pounds sterling. But this class of business is all in "semi-ready" clothing, a system which has been adopted from American tailors.

Yet the American "ready-made" has been a subject of laughter on the other slde; and the New Yorker's the world," has been received with jeers. To the foreigner the idea of a man who has literally "no time" to devote to matters sartorial being well dressed is absurd—and the New Yorker has no time. He can't wait for clothes to be made by a "custom"

When he needs a suit he dashes into one of those immense haberdasheries that dot both sides of Broadway from the Battery to the Bronx, where es are ornamented on Easter Day are thousands of "ready for service" sults most probably emblems of the Resurand overcoats are pilled on long tables rection. There are people today who in stacks that rise above a man's head. Here are found prices and sizes worn on Easter Day no good fortune to fit every customer. Sack suits will come to them during the year from $3 to $50 advertised for cut and smartness. They are smart, too, are this quaint little verse in regard to better cut and sewn than the English this custom: cheap suit, but the latter is made of "Laste Easter I put on my blue frock better material. It is just this difference that makes the American crowd look smart and prosperous, while the English crowd looks merely comfort-

The New Yorker must look prospe ous. It is part of his stock in trade. His clothes must not appear old any more than his face. This demand for youth and freshness is what makes it possible for some firms to sell as high as 7,000 suits in a day. Hats and shoes get even more attention clothes. The ancient saw, " "When broke buy a new hat," is so thoroughly appreciated by the New Yorker that he receives without even a grin such advertisements as that which puzzled Count Witte as he walked down Broadway, "Fall Lids for Faded Faces," it read. "Fall," mut-tered the Russian diplomat with a look of weary amazement, "fall, that means to tumble down, does it not?" Some one explained that "fall" was the American for the season which all other nations know as autumn.

Last winter a leading London daily gave a column every morning to the discussion of "The Fetish of the Black Coat." Every clerk and sales. Every clerk and salesman in London wears a frock, or Prince Albert, during his work, and, I'm always thinking at like the English artisan, he wears the lowing me. costume of his trade after hours. coat that gives you a caved-in chest of the white tie and pearl studs that when it's buttoned up and a decidedly must be worn with the tailed coat. The American speaks of his Tuxedo suit and his dress suit. The Englishman talks of his evening clothes, and would as soon think of changing his trousers to match his smoking jacket, as of changing his stude and tie to accord with his Tuxedo.

While the vast majority of men buy their clothes "ready" or "semi-ready' made, most men regard with envy the one who has time and money to have his clothes made and fitted. The Englishman of means considers it his duty to have his clothes made by the best tailors and to wear them as badly as possible. As he can rarely remain long at a tlme within hls own country. London custom tailors have stored in their safes measurements of hundreds of wandering Britons who usually cable from various parts of the world when they need new clothes. These measurements are a valuable asset and insurance on them frequently amounts to several thou sand pounds sterling.

As a matter of fact, the best dressed man in the world is nelther the New claim to be the, "best dressed man in Yorker nor the Londoner, but the man who gets his frock coat, cutaway and evening clothes from the Bond Street tallors, who have made these styles of masculine dress for centuries, and his sack suits and overcoats from Fifth Avenue, where one might say they were invented.

ANIMAL HEROES.

The Thrilling Story of "Snap" the Bull Terrier.

Ernest Thompson Seton's last book, "Animal heroes", is, if possible, more than ever up to the standard of his intensity interesting wild-animal tales. To the animal lover this new collection will be read with absorbing attention. Mr. Seton has been subjected to considerable criticism by other naturalists, notably, John Burroughs, for endowing his animal characters with nnew man animal intelligence and powers, which, it is claimed, are not possessed by any dumb reatures. Very likely, as a class, but, as Mr. Seton himself admits in his preface to "Animal Heroes", these histories, while in each case founded on the actual life-doings of a rest animal, are more or less composite. What novellst, indeed, does not combine the most striking characteristics of several individuals to construct his human hero, who shall appeal to the reader as an exceptionally fine character? So has Mr. Seton taken the record of a number of wood or other animals and embodied their most striking "killis" or follings of the parek luto one sagaelous, brave and glgantic specimen. Like all of his books, "Animal Heroes" is delightfully illustrated by some two-humdred drawings and sketches from his own and ins wife's pencils. Interest is stimulated by a constant succession of marginal drawings, liberally interspersed with full page paintings of thrilling incidents. The story of good-hunding, of fierce pursuit, of fatat closing in—sometimes to the pursued, seventimess where pursuer—is tode by an open continued to the prond, indomitable, fearless beast even though he be the scory the low which his better worth the reading, and withal sadder in its finale than is the account in this volume of the little dog, "Snap." THE FIGHTING INSTINCT.

Story of a Desperate Hand to Hand Encounter Against Heavy Odds.

Now and then among the brutalities and crimes that form the chief subjects of daily journalism in this country, there comes an item that not only appeals to our morbid nature but gets in close to the primal love of fight which springs eternal in the human animal. Most of us have no feeling except of loathing in the case of the secret assassination of six Italians in Minneapolis, because their modes of fight are Latin in a country of Anglo-Saxon prejudices. But just a week before, the press dispatches from Bristol, Tennessee, told of the sudden demise of seven Italians who with others had conspired to murder their section foreman, because he was a "hard boss." Doubtless he was! Nevertheless, the old fighting blood tingles at the bare account of the battle that the foreman, Haverly, whose name suggests his nationality, waged single-handed against the body of laborers that "rushed" him, Had he been armed with a revolver, he would have no sympathy, but he depended on the first weapon at hand-a crowbar. Backed against an embankment, he withstood the combined attack of the entire gang of laborers, all bent on his murder, and armed, against him, with is to ascertain at what point the decay picks, axes, and spades, in addition has progressed to such an extent as to of killing may be, one can scarcely help a thrill at the thought of the fore.

There is at present no law prohibitman, Haverly, at bay like a knight of former days, fighting for his life, and length of time. The only law upon the so sturdily and valiantly laying about him, weapon for weapon, steel against steel, until he stretched seven of his assallants dead before him and routed the rest. Haverly may be a brute and a bully; he may have deserved what the laborers, rising like desperate slaves against a tyrant, had in store for him. Yet, somehow, that Is hard to believe because the innate love for combat in our nature challenges admiration for a man who displays desperate courage and physical prowess.

Little Cannibals. Every once in a while we hear of preeders complaining of the cannibalistic habits among growing fowls. espe cially among those still in the days of their early babyhood. This pernicious habit, when once the young birds be-come thoroughly addicted to it, is rather difficult to control and suppress. Usually it finds its chief expression in flocks confined to close quarters, where the ground is bare and the feed is wanting in animal matter. Bird life under natural conditions finds oppor-tunity for work and play in the hunting of insects for food and in the careful selection of such vegetable matter as its system may demand. Young chicks, when confined, are obviously deprived of these opportunities for a healthful exercise; the result is that they become idle, which engenders Nothing to Try vicious habits and a craving for some thing to do as well as for animal food. When in this condition if a member of the little flock shows a wound or effects of blood, the chances are that one or two will at once commence to peck at it, which leads the others on and soon the whole flock will be rending the little one into shreds, devouring it before one has opportunity to relieve its misery or to isolate it from the flock. The remedy, of course, is obvious, namely, afford the young chicks a wider range and be more careful in your feeding by making it a point to keep them busy by throwing the food into litter or suspending a head of lettuce or cabbage where they can peck at it; also supply in one form or another animal food. A good way to do this is to take the underground

PERILS IN COLD STORAGE.

Frozen Bacteria Active-Government to Make Experiments.

The Agricultural Department is following up a line of scientific investiga-tion of the effect upon perishable goods in cold storage for an unlimited time, and Dr. Wiley believes that he will de velop the fact that legislation is needed fixing the period for which such articles as meats and milks may be stored.

In one of the Philadelphla cold storage houses space has been set aside for the examinents and a like arrangement has been made in Washington for storing birds and milk.

The stored articles will be taken out from time to time and examined to as-certain whether or not deterioration has begun, and at what period the point has been reached when the articles can be no longer stored and remain good food.

It already has been demonstrated, Dr. Wiley says, that the bacteria that occasion decay remain in the meat while frozen, and that they actually carry on their work, although at a greatly reduced rate.

In one of the cold storage plants in Cleveland some meat was recently found which had been mislaid and forgotten for a period of eleven years. It was sent to the department and a portion thawed out and examined.

Decay had gone on to such an extent that the meat was entirely ur The greater portion of lt was again placed in storage and the observation will be continued. The fact that the meat, having been frozen for eleven years, was in a condition of decay is held to conclusively prove that the bacteria can work in the meat while frozen. The Oregon's Big Pennant.

When the Oregon left Hongkong recently, after her long period of service on the Asiatic station, she was flying a homeward-bound pennant over 500 feet in length. It was necessary to support this long streamer by two small bal-loons tied to the end to keep it out of the water. The pennant was made of silk thread and attracted much attention in the Asiatic port.

In the old days it was the custom to have a foot of pennant for every day of the cruise. That of the Oregon is probably one of the longest displayed from the mast of a home-coming ship, although it is on record that the old Brooklyn, on one occasion upon her arrival in New York, displayed a pennant

I was awakened early the next morning by the sun. My clothes were damp with cloud moisture. I did not learn until then that there was an aluminum roof to the air car, which was pocketed in the basket-work sides, and that there were four electric radiators to provide heat. Thereafter I was more comfortable

The ship floated steadily high in the The ship floated steadily high in the clouds. I could see nothing but vapor being rapidly dissipated by the sun, which occasionally shot clear rays into my eyes. It steered perfectly, and could be sent up or down by the elevation or depression of broad aluminum biades fore and aft A small motor, run by a powerful chemical battery, operated the propel-lers; though it was often possible to travel rapidly with the wind alone as motive power. There was also a Faure condenser for extracting hydrogen from the air, which operated automatically keeping the bag always fully inflated. A wireless telephone outfit, various scientific instruments, the electric lighting and heating apparatus and the tank ing and heating apparatus and the tank for condensing water from the gasbag were noveltics in their way. I found also a second hamper of food and drinkable, and, to my great delight, a box of fine Key West clgars, which I opened immediately. SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

James Adams, West Point graduate, is in Paris at the opening of the French-German war. In a balloon reconnoissance for the French he is almost captured by the Germans. The balloon is wrecked at the C'ateau Lagunay. Rescued, Adams falls in love with Aimee, daughter of the Count Lagunay. The Germans invade France, A German Colonel, Griesman, insults Aimee and is attacked by Adams, who is in turn overpowered by the Kaiser.

When one took note of their enormous turret guns—twenty-inch, without doubt, capable of hurling a ton or more of metal every five minutes. I counted ten battleships, five or six torpedo-boat destroyers (recognized by their quadruplicate funnels) and several eruisers. > I looked up in astonishment, and there floated the strangest airship I had ever seen. It was merely an aeroplane, supported by great saucer-like metal contrivanees, with a small basket-car hung by slender cables. It swept by, some hundred feet above me, and I had a glimpse of a white face looking down upon me. I sped up the motor, and rising as I advanced soon drew up alongside my fellow traveler. Then ensued a brief conversation.

"Yes."
"Drop to the sea, then, and I will pick you up. My ship steers perfectly."
We were now far beyond the fleet. I descended by degrees. The other tipped his pianes slightly and started down on a long stant, like a boy coasting down a hill. When within twenty feet or less of the water he tipped the pianes sharply in the other direction, and his or less of the water he tipped the planes sharply in the other direction, and his ship stopped with a shudder, hovered for a time like a brooding guil, and settled slowly into the sea. I was close behind him with a small rope-ladder, and a minute later, dripping wet, but cheerful, he clambered into my car. Then we rose again to the two-thousand-foot level and with just enough headway on to overcome the wind low headway on to overcome the wind, lay

When I had started the motor and set the fans to descend I took a telestop from the rack and waited eager-ly for a sight of something that would indicate my whereabouts. By the compass I was going due west, and if that direction had been maintained all night I was far out on the Atlantie.

At last the clouds around me thinned and vanished, and I came into clear air. Below me, stretching away in all directions to the horizon, lay the sea, its tossing waves breaking white under

The bomb contained also a magnet and eircuit-breaker so tuned as to be responsive to electrical vibrations set up in a powerful electrical instrument on the discharging ship. By the use of a unique range finding apparatus the bomb was kept in sight during its whole flight, and upon reaching the desired point it was exploded by the mere pressure of a button on the ship from which it had been fired. Tests from which it had been fired. Tests with this bomb had shown wonderful accuracy and most deadiy effects.

Another offensive device was an aerial illuminator—a smail, bailoon-like affair, arranged to float at a considerable elevation, and carrying a powerful chemical light, backed by strong reflectors. A shoal of these illuminators would be sent toward the enemy's fleet, lighting up the sea and the vessels and making easy targets for the German guns.

Against these devices the French had prepared an aerial bomb to discharge a heavy and deadly gas, and to sprinkle acids or explosives upon the ships of the enemy. They were also provided with aluminum armor, so thick and tough that an ordinary projectile would merely become imbedded therein and held fast without being abie to pass through. Around their ships and under water they hung large electro-magnets, exerting, by peculiar wiring, a repelling influence on approaching torpedoes at a distance of a hundred yards, invariably turning them aside. Their at a distance of a hundred yards, invariably turning them aside. Their mainstay, however, was a new centrifugal submarine torpedo-boat, which needed not to come to the surface, remaining down for days at a time, yet needed not to come to the surface, remaining down for days at a time, yet observing operations on the surface, and doing its work with deadly accuracy. LeFevre could not give me the details of this strange machine. Its terrible effectiveness, however, was apparent the next day.

I had no apprehension whatever as to the stability of L'Aimee, and we lay down and went to sleep that night without the least apprehension. Stanch and true was she, even as my own sweet betrothed. It was still dark, when I was awakened with a start by the sound of heavy detonations below us. I leaped to my feet and looked over the side of the car, LeFevre joined me the next moment.

The Germans had evidently planned a night attack by the use of their filuminators. Below us the sea was alight in great spots, and dimly we could make out the vessels over which shone the strong, blue-white lights. Far off in the darkness we could see the occasional flash of a gun. The Germans slonal flash of a gun. The Germans were sending home great shells loaded with explosives. Their aerial bombs could not be followed at night. The could not be followed at night. The French were replying, but their fire was more or less blind. The roar of the guns came up to us plainly. It shook the heavens. Suddenly there was a flash that lit up the whole sky, and a terrific explosion sounded from below. A German shell had found its mark. One of the French battleships had gone to her long home.

During the rest of the night there was no intermission in the heavy firing. Fearful explosions sounded now and then, and we could but guess the de-then, and we could but guess the destruction that was being wrought. I had no wish to see either side win at the expense of the other.

At dawn we were able to note the situation elearly. Six or eight miles away to the northeast lay the German fleet. Almost beneath us the French were gathered in loose order. Both were plying their great guns. On both sides were gathered in loose order. Both were plying their great guns. On both sides burning ships were drifting away, others were eareening, half-filled with water. And now, with the coming of daylight, the combatants resorted to their deadlert appliances.

German squadron was in fine shape, but three of its battleships disabled I sent L'Aimee lower to observe more I sent L'Aimee lower to observe more closely. The Centrifugal heeded not the torpedo nets. It passed through obthe torpedo nets. It passed through obstructions as though it were spirit. We saw it under the bow of the Frederich Wilhelm, the largest battleship of the fleet. For half a minute it lay there, surrounded as ever by that whirl of sparkling bubbles. Then it darted away toward another. So interested were we in watching the uncanny movements of the strange boat that we did ments of the strange boat that we did not observe the confusion on board the Frederich, nor on the others that were successively visited. LeFevre noticed successively visited. Levevre noticed the great ships settling low in the water, and spoke of it to me. There was something terrible about this de-stroyer. Inside of fifteen minutes every vessel in that fleet had been stung, as it were, by this great hornet of the sea and every one was sinking. The sea-men were throwing themselves off; boats were putting out; rafts were flung into the sea. Presently the Centrifugal fluished her work and we saw her whilling away, stopping here and there to smell a submarine and to kiss it or to sting it as it happened to be frlend or foe. What a sight! Twenty-four German ships sinking, sinking, going down to eternal silence. One after another they vanished. The torpedo boats came to the surface saw what had hancame to the surface, saw what had hap-pened, and put out for home and neu-tral ports. The Centrifugal, the grim destroyer, vanished. The great battle was over. And neither side could be said to have won. It was practical an-nihilation for both. Two magnificent fleets of modern war vessels gone, absolutely gone; a quarter of a billion dollars in battleships and thousands of brave fellows dead, only to satisfy the bickerlngs of diplomats—saerifices to foolish notions of honor.

Maxine Elliott.

Maxine Elliott, who has taken a house in London and will leave stage for a time to enjoy social life, is famous as an actress and also for her beauty. Miss Elliott, who, upon the stage, retains her maiden name, under which she became famous, is the wife of Nat C. Goodwin, to whom she was married in 1898. She was born in Rockland, Me., and was but 16 when she first appeared on the stage. Her serious work, however, did not begin until 1890, when she became as-sociated with E. S. Willard. Subsequently she became a member of Daly's stock company and rapidly won dis-tinction, which has been enhanced by her performance in her husband's com pany. Dramatically and socially she is a great favorite in both the United States and England.

Copper in Water Kills Germs. In looking to the purification of the water supply, either the local farm supply or the water for a great city, re-markable results are announced from the application of a new method of destroying micro-organisms in water, which was discovered about a year ago by Drs. Moore and Kellerman, of the Bureau of Plant Industry at Washington. It consists simply in dissolving a certain quantity of copper sulphate in the water to be purified. Fortunately the dilution can be made so large that no deleterious effects are produced up-on the water intended for drinking purposes. One part of copper sulphate to eight million parts of water is the proportion generally used, and it is pointed out that, in order to obtain any effect of copper from such a mix-ture a man would have to drink forty gallons of the water.

During the latter part of 1904 more than fifty sources of water supply in the United States were treated by this method with gratifying success. only are dangerous bacteria thus destroyed but the green growths that frequently choke up small ponds are also eliminated. Most important of all is

To LeFevre the operations of the Centrifugal were a triumph for France, and he was enthusiastic in his delight. But I cared little one way or the other. I was tired of it all. Life had been too strenuous for me. I wanted quiet for a while, and naturally my thoughts turned to Aimee, my sweetheart. Was she safe?

LeFevre insisted that I come with him to his home, but I refused. Turning to the east we made our way rapidity to the French coast. Here we settled to earth in the open country, and after bidding LeFevre adieu I rose again and made my way east. I had but one thought, now that the battle was over, and that thought I was putting into action. My objective was Bethel, where I knew my love awaited me.

For a young girl's gown there is no smarter model than the one sketched here. Every feature of the dress serves a purpose and the result is a graceful and becoming whole. The yoke lends breadth to shoulders which need it, while the tucks extending a short distance below, supply a becoming fullness for the blouse. The plastron front, continued in effect by the front pleat of the skirt, suggests height and slenderness, The skirt is pleated all around slenderness, Rajah, linen, taffetas or cashmere might develop this design. Food Regulation Abroad.

Food legislation has received much attention abroad and the more advanced foreign countries have effective food laws and enforce them rigidly. The subject of the purity of foods is more widely studied in the United The people as a whole are better in formed on the subject than ever before, and there is a constantly increasing demand for definite information. In response to a very large number of inquiries regarding the matter the bulletin of the Bureau of Chemistry has been prepared as a popular statement regarding the nature and extent of food adulteration, and includes simple tests by which the housekeeper or retail dealer may determine some of the more prevalent forms of adulteration practiced.

The demand for information on this subject is now very general, and, as is often the case when public interest is deeply aroused, there is an unfortunate tendency toward exaggeration which frequently amounts to sensa-tionalism. Such an attitude is of course to be deplored, and unless it is checked must sooner or later react unfavorably. It is not unusual speak of some of our typical foods as poisoned, and of the manufacturers as poisoners. Such characterizations are frequently exaggerations to the point of untruth. Deleterious substances are in many cases added to foods. At the same time the word "poison" has a very strong and distinct significance and should not be applied to any one of the substances ordinarily added to foods, except in the sense that they are harmful. The word "poisoner" signifies a person who intentionally and deliberately administers an article intended to result fatally, or at least very disastrously to health.

The Juggling of Words. During recent years there has been tendency to confuse the minds of many by an incorrect use of certain words frequently used in the discussion of foods. It is the policy of some man-ufacturers to limit the word "adulterated" to foods to which have been added substances of lower value than the foods themselves with the intention of increasing the weight or vol-ume. This limitation is certainly not justified by the English language nor by the facts, and such a restriction of the term is entirely unwarranted. The word "adulterated" properly describes a food to which any noncondimental foreign substance, not properly con-stituting a portion of the food, has been added. The fact that the added substance may be at times of a greater commercial value than the food itself has no bearing on the question. Conversely, the word "pure" is properly applicable to foods that are unmixed

Geese, to be properly mar-keted at their best, should be plucked at the right time, then fed and cared for so as to be ready for killing just as the new growth of plumage is full and complete and ready to be stripped clean and clear from the body at killing as an ordinary lead pencil. time. This is the scientific part, next to the experience in the handling, feeding and caring for, which bring such large numbers to the finest finish and most desirable condition for selling in he market.

It is a sight one would never forget to see eight or ten thousand of these geese confined in lots or runways being fed and cared for by attendants to bring them to that perfection of market poultry not usually seen outside of New England and New York City. T. F. McGrew.

Why Land is a Good Investment. The statistician of the Department of Agriculture of the United States estlmates that in 1931 the population of this country will be 130,000,000, and the census bureau agrees that this is a conservative estimate. To supply the requirements of this number of people will necessitate the production of 700,-000,000 bushels of wheat, 1,250,000,000 bushels of oats, 345,000,000 bushels of corn, 100,000,000 tons of hay; and cotton, tobacco and fruits and vegetables in proportion. To produce this immensely increased quantity of food and kindred products will necessitate the bringing under cultivation of an addi-000,000 acres available for cultivation. Of course these estimates do not take into account the efforts of Secretary ually produce double its present crop.

Selling Chicks a Day Old. The hatching of chicks in quantities and then selling them direct to poultry breeders and fanciers is a business that is developing all over the country, largely doing away with the bother of sitting hens and the detail and attention entailed by operating an incu-bator. The plan is simplicity itself. Experienced incubator operators put in substantial hatching plants solely for the production and immediate disposition of chicks direct to poultry people both amateur and professional. For the most part the new method possesses some range in its application. It has been found that day-old chicks will bear shipment to a considerable distance, and that a car ride of from ten to fifteen and twenty hours is not considered extra hazardous. day-old chicks are a matter of barter between seller and buyer, something depending on the breeds and strains, out usually ranging $1.50 and up po dozen.

There are several establishments in this country which make this an clusive business, and enjoy a hatching capacity of from 1,000 to 6,000 eggs a a time. All report a healthy demand

Don't Die

Millions Die Every Year from Mere Ignorance of Nature's Laws of Health

Ask yourself the question: "Is Life Worth Living?"
And the answer will be: "It depends on your health."
Then why not have good health? If you are sick it is because some simple, natural law of health has been violated.

Nature is a Stern and Inexorable Judge, and Grants No Pardons When Her Laws are Broken

Better Learn Those Laws. You can't learn them too soon. You can't learn them all at once. Begin right now, and Learn a little every month.

Send a dime or five two-cent stamps to 1405 Fisher Bnilding, Chicago, for one whole year's subscription for Maxwell's Homemaker Magazine, and read the Department "Health in the Home. Health from Nature, by Right Thought and Right Living."

Read it every month-year in and year out-and learn all about Nature's Laws of Health, and save Doctors' Bills and Drug Bills, and you will enjoy many years of Life and good health after you otherwise would have been dead and buried—or maybe cremated. Whether you are buried or cremated doesn't so much matter. It's the dying part that counts. Train "Good Health" as your faithful body-guard to kick old "Grim Death," Scythe and ail, luto the street if he calls shead of time. Get your "pointers on training" from Maxwell's Homemaker Magazine.
